The rep reading frame codes four proteins, kep 78, kep 68, kep 52 and kep 40, while the cap reading frame encodes three structural proteins, vpl, vp2 and vp3. The AAV-1 sequence or its fragments particularly ITRs, rep and cap coding regions, are useful in production of recombinant viral vectors for gene delivery. These vectors can be used as gene therapy vectors, vaccine vectors or antisense delivery vectors. The AAV-1 does not induce the formation of neutralising antibodies specific to any serotype of AAV hence is useful for transforming host cells, and in the preparation of a medicament for the delivery of transgene to a host. The present sequence is an AAV-1 cap protein VP1 which is useful in the production of recombinant viral vector for gene delivery

These sequences were used in the scope of the invention for comparison with the cap protein derived from AAV serotype 9. The AAV capsid comprises three proteins vpl, vp2 and vp3, which are alternative splice variants. The AAV or the nucleic acid molecule is useful for preparing a medicament for delivering a transgene

                                                                        The present sequence is the protein sequence of the vpl capsid protein of adeno associated virus serotype 1 (AAVI). The invention provides the nucleic acid and amino acid sequences of novel AAVB and fragments of these sequences. Each of these fragments may be used in a variety of vector systems and host cells. Among the desirable fragments are the cap proteins, including vpl, vp2, vp3 and hypervariable regions, the rep proteins, including vp1, vp2, vp3 and hypervariable regions, the rep proteins, including rep78, rep68, rep52 and rep40, and the sequences encoding these proteins. The fragments may be used alone, in combination with other AAVB sequences or in combination with elements from other AAV or non-AAV viral sequences in the production of recombinant AAV and for use as antisense delivery vectors, gene therapy vectors or vaccine

The invention relates to a novel method for detecting adeno-associated covirus (AAV) sequences in a sample, which comprises subjecting a sample containing a DNA to amplification via a polymerase chain reaction (PCR). The AAV sequence have the following activities: cytostatic, antipsoriatic, antirheumatic, antiarthritic, neuroprotective, antipsoriatic, antirhyroid, dermatological, and antiinflammatory. The AAV sequence can be used in gene therapy or as part of a vaccine to treat disorders. The method is useful in detecting and/or identifying AAV sequences and isolating novel sequences that are identified. The sequences may be used e.g. for preventing or treating hyperproliferative conditions such as cancers and psoriasis, and other aucoimmune diseases clike rheumatoid arthritis, multiple sclerosis, diabetes, autoimmune thyroidatis, scleroderma or Crohn's disease. This sequence represents an conditions sclerosian sequence of the invention.

The methods and compositions of the present invention are useful for the prevention and/or treatment of rheumatoid arthritis, multiple sclerosis, arcoidosis, diabetes, scleroderma, psoriasis, vasculitis, Crohn's disease, hemophilia, HIV, bacterial infection, cancer and ulcerative colitis. The present sequence represents the amino acid sequence of an adeno-associated virus protein.

The specification describes a method for lowering total cholesterol levels in a subject. The method comprises delivering to the subject a recombinant adeno-associated virus (AAV) comprising a gene encoding a human apolipoprotein E (apoE) or apoA under the control of a regulatory control sequence which directs expression of the gene. The recombinant AAV also comprises a capsid protein selected from an AAV serotype (e.g. AAV7 or AAV8) which preferentially expresses high levels of transgene in live. A therapeutically effective amount of apoE or apoA expression is obtained upon delivery of low dose of AAV. The method of the invention is

The methods and compositions of the present invention are useful for the prevention and/or treatment of rheumatoid arthritis, multiple sclerosis, sarcoidosis, diabetes, scleroderma, psoriasis, vasculitis, Crohn's disease, hemophilia, HIV, bacterial infection, cancer and ulcerative colitis. The present sequence represents the amino acid sequence of an adeno-associated virus protein.

The methods and compositions of the present invention are useful for the prevention and/or treatment of rheumatoid arthritis, multiple sclerosis, sarcoidosis, diabetes, scleroderma, psoriasis, vasculitis, Crohn's disease, hemophilia, HIV, bacterial infection, cancer and ulcerative colitis. The present sequence represents the amino acid sequence of an adeno-associated virus protein.

The present sequence is capsid protein VPI of one such serotype (AAV6). AAV6 can be used to contruct AAV viral vectors for use in gene therapy for a range of disorders: cystic fibrosis, cancer, AIDS, atherosclerosis, sickle cell anaemia, thalassaemia, blood clotting disorders and diabetes she have viral vectors have increased transduction efficiency of a particular host cell as the AAV virion containing the AAV vector genome can be modified to express a capsid protein of an AAV serotype that

                                                    The invention relates to a novel method for detecting adeno-associated CC virus (AAV) sequences in a sample, which comprises subjecting a sample CC containing a DNA to amplification via a polymerase chain reaction (PCR). The AAV sequence have the following activities: cyrostatic, antirheumatic, antiarthritic, neuroprotective, antignoriatic, antirhyroid, dermatological, and antiinflammatory. The AAV sequence can be used in gene therapy or as part of a vaccine to treat disorders. The method is useful in detecting and/or identifying AAV sequences and isolating novel sequences that are identified. The sequences may be used e.g. for preventing or treating hyperproliferative conditions such as cancers and psoriasis, and other autoimmune diseases (like rheumatoid arthritis, multiple sclerosis, diabetes, autoimmune trhyroiditis, scleroderma or Crohn's disease. This sequence represents an C AAV related protein sequence of the invention.

SEQ ID NO 19; 136pp; English

delivering a recombinant AAV virion to a cell or tissue of a vertebrate subject. The recombinant AAV virion is useful for delivering a heterologous nucleic acid molecule to a cell or tissue of a vertebrate subject. Where the protein encoded by the heterologous nucleic acid molecule is expressed at a level that provides a therapeutic effect, where the recombinant AAV virion may comprise a non-primate, mammalian where the protein that when present in an AAV virion imparts decreased immunoreactivity to the virion as compared to immunoreactivity of primate AAV-2, and the heterologous nucleic acid molecule, where the heterologous immunoreactivity to the virion as compared to the corresponding wild-type virion. Also described are: a polynucleotide encoding the mutated protein above; a recombinant AAV virion comprising the mutated protein above; and Nyan syndrome, Zellweger syndrome, ischemic diseases, atherosclerosis, thrombosis, embolisms, Parkinson's disease, congestive heart failure, cancer, inflammatory and immune disorders, muscular dystrophies, and diabetes. This is the amino acid sequence of adeno-associated virus 6 nucleic acid molecule encodes a therapeutic protein and is operably linked to control elements capable of directing the in vivo transcription and translation of the protein. The protein or the recombinant AAV virion is useful for treating or preventing a wide variety of disorders such as hemophilia, glycogen storage deficiency type 1A, Pepck deficiency, galactosemia, phenylketonuria, Crigler-Najjar disease, Gout and Lesch-Nyan syndrome, Zellweger syndrome, ischemic diseases, atherosclerosis, protein that when present invention protein describes a amino acid sequence of adeno-associated virus 6 VP1. in an AAV virion mutated adeno-associated sociated virus (AAV) imparts decreased capsid
